What we did:

During silent reading (works for many other times too) we have 3 overhead transparencies. One is green and says "thank you for reading quietly". One is yellow and says "remember, this is a valuable silent reading time". One is red and says "you are not reading quietly, get yourself back on track before I have to intercede". We switch them as appropriate.

What it accomplished:

Visual reminders/allows getting the point across, but remaining silent.

Comments or Suggestions:

Works well for many purposes. Just the colored transparencies are effective on their own
